Let's Start!

Things are going well!

Learning Outcome

Describe the reasons or results of events or actions in spoken or written texts, in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- Has anyone ever done something really important for you on short notice? What was it?
- How did you show your appreciation for what they did?

Can Do Statements

- I can discuss reasons and results of an event or action related to work and jobs.
- I can express willingness or intention to do something in work and job issues.
- I can exchange complex professional information related to work and job issues.

Let's Explore!

Adam and Kristi take stock of the situation.

* "Take stock of the situation" means to look at the situation and how it is progressing.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Adam: So Kristi, what do you think? It seems to be going well, don't you think?
- Kristi: Yes, I think so. I can't relax though until it is completely over and nothing else can go wrong.
- Adam: I'll get you a glass of wine.
- Kristi: Thanks Adam but I would like to wait until we leave. I need to keep my wits about me in order that I'm able to deal with any issues that come up.
- Adam: I think you're home free now. The catering arrived right on time and the food is excellent. The kids loved those mini pizzas. The wine is excellent. I thought we needed more bottles but we have just enough. People wouldn't take more than one glass. I guess the parents can't drink much because they have their kids with them. More for the rest of us! I'll save a bottle for you.
- Kristi: You're still working. I might need your help again. By the way, thanks again for getting Thomas here on such short notice. I'm so impressed by how much he knows about social media and how kids use it. He's such an eloquent speaker too. I can't believe he just walked in here and addressed the crowd like that without preparing.
- Adam: Well, he's so passionate about it that it's easy for him to talk about it. When we lived together he would try to teach me about it but I was never as interested as he is. ... Wow, look at the line-up now to buy a signed copy of the book! People are buying it now since the launch has made it look so great.
- Kristi: Yeah, isn't it great? I didn't expect so many people would buy it here at the launch.
- Adam: I think Thomas really got people thinking about the risks owing to exposure on social media and as a parent that's something you would want to act on right away, right?
- Kristi: Yeah, you're right. They're buying the book so that they can keep abreast of something that's changed a lot.

Let's Practice!

Kristi and Adam think the launch is going well.

Learning Points

Will and Would to Express Intention or Willingness

Will and would are modals. You can use these modals to express willingness or intention. Willingness can be defined as the readiness to do something. Intention can be defined as an aim.

Will/ Won't

You use will / won't to express that someone is / is not willing to do something in the present.

For example:

Richard is a nice guy; he will always help you if you are in trouble.

Fernanda is mad at me; she will not (won't) talk to me.

Would/ Would not

You use would / wouldn't to express that someone was / was not willing to do something in the past.

For example:

My grandpa was such a nice man; he would always help people if they were in need.

My teacher always helped me with unknown words, but he wouldn't translate the whole text.

Read the examples from the text. Keep the context in mind as you do.

Examples:

- I'll get you a glass of wine.
- People wouldn't take more than one glass.
- I'll save a bottle for you.
- When we lived together he would try to teach me about it but I was never as interested as he is.
- I'll call you as soon as they arrive.

Learning Points

Reason Clauses Including so ... (that)

You can introduce result clauses using words and phrases such as so that, in order that, because, since, and owing to.

in order that / so that

You use in order that and so that to talk about the purpose of an action.

For example:

I need to keep my wits about me in order that I'm able to deal with any issues that come up.

They're buying the book so that they can keep abreast of something that's changed a lot.

The difference between those two clauses is that in order that is more formal.

Because

You answer the question why? with because. It is the most common word used in conversation.

For example:

I guess the parents can't drink much because they have their kids with them.

Since / Owing to

You use since or owing to to introduce a reason that the listener already knows about.

For example:

People are buying it now since the launch made it look so great.

People are buying it now owing to the launch making it look so great.

Examples:

- I need to keep my wits about me in order that I'm able to deal with any issues that come up.
- I guess the parents can't drink much because they have their kids with them.
- People are buying it now since the launch made it look so great.
- I think Thomas really got people thinking about the risks owing to exposure on social media.
- They're buying the book so that they can keep abreast of something that's changed a lot.
