Let's Start!

Let's review!

Learning Outcome

Describe the reasons or results of events or actions in spoken or written texts, in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- What do you think makes an event a success?
- Describe an event that you organized or attended that was not a success.

Can Do Statements

- I can discuss reasons and results of an event or action related to work and jobs.
- I can talk or report about things, actions, events, or people in a work environment.
- I can exchange complex information about my work responsibilities and the nature of my tasks.

Let's Explore!

The book launch created a lot of buzz *for the book!

* "Buzz" is a feeling of excitement, energy and anticipation.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Denise: Well everyone, I'd say that because of some really hard work the launch was a great success! The venue was great. Everyone had a good time, the kids were entertained, everyone had something to eat and drink and we sold some books. I think we generated a lot of buzz for the book too and that's always a good thing. What do you think Kristi? It was understood that this was your first launch for us. How do you feel about how it went?

Kristi: I'm really happy with the reaction from the crowd. There were a few extra requirements due to unforeseen events, but we pulled together and we got back on track. It was discovered at the last minute that owing to illness, the speaker was unable to attend so we had to arrange for an alternate speaker. Luckily, Thomas was available and it was revealed that he is a very engaging and entertaining speaker. He is so well-versed on the subject of social media that he was able to come and speak without much advance notice. Thank you to Adam for coming up with that last-minute save!

Denise: Yes, Adam, thank you! It was observed that you were a great assistant during the preparation and arranging for the launch. You were a great problem-solver and really pitched in wherever help was needed. We all appreciate that. The author was happy and said that because of the way we handled her launch, she hopes to work with us on her next book. It was also decided that we would extend the print run of the book, based on the feedback at the launch and on social media. So, once again, congratulations Kristi on your first launch with us. Well done everyone and thank you all for your hard work.

Kristi: Thank you Denise. It is agreed that the launch was a wonderful success!

Learning Points

Reason Clauses: Due to, because of, owing to Result Clauses: So ... that

Remember, when you want to introduce a reason for a particular situation, you can use these prepositions at the beginning of the clause.

- You use because of before a noun or a noun phrase.
- Due to and owing to also mean because of. They sound a little more formal, and are therefore more common in professional English rather than conversational.
- When you want to link a cause with a result, you can use so ... that. You normally use an adjective or adverb after so.
- Remember than in formal English, you can put So ... that at the beginning of the sentence and put the verb before the object.

Examples:

- I'd say that because of some really hard work the launch was a great success!
- There were a few snags due to unforeseen events but we pulled together and we pulled it off.
- It was discovered at the last minute that owing to illness, the speaker was unable to attend so we had to arrange for someone else.
- He is so well-versed on the subject of social media that he was able to come and speak without much advance notice.
- The author was very happy and said that because of the way we handled her launch, she hopes to work with us on her next book.

Report Verbs with Impersonal Passive Construction

When you want to report a fact or belief, you can use a variety of ways to construct your ideas. When you do not want to mention the source of the information, you can use a passive structure.

You can use the structure It + passive verb + that + finite clause.
A finite clause contain a verb which shows tense.

For example:

- It was mentioned that the accident occurred at night.
- It has been demonstrated that the hypothesis is accurate.
- It is suggested that costs should decrease next month.

The following are report verbs you can use:

admit	explain	prove
agree	fear	recommend
