Let's Start!

There are so many things to prepare for the book launch!

Learning Outcome

Express duty, advice, willingness, or intention to do something in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts. .

Ask your partner:

- What are some things that you might need to ask for consent for?
- Why do people require the use of signed consent forms?

Can Do Statements

- I can request or report about the purpose of events or actions related to job issues.
- I can express willingness or intention to do something in work and job issues in a written way.
- I can exchange complex professional information related to work and job issues.

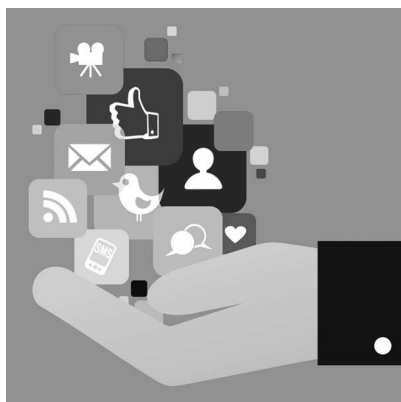

Let's Explore!

Adam has a friend who works in Social Media. What can he talk about?

* You can use the preposition "in" to talk about a field of work.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Kristi: It looks like we are almost set up. The tables are all ready. We've got an alternate entrance so that we don't clog up the main entrance. We've got lots of copies of the book to sell to the guests. I'll stand outside for a bit to make sure people can find the entrance.
- Adam: I'll take care of the consent forms. Just let me know who to give one to.
- Kristi: Oh, thanks! I had forgotten all about the consent form. Can I see it?
- Adam: Yes. I had to research in order that I would know what the requirements of a consent form are and then I designed this one for us. I'll use it for getting permission to use photos.
- Kristi: It looks great. Thanks, Adam. ... Oh no! This isn't good.
- Adam: What's wrong?
- Kristi: I just got a text from the speaker I had lined up to talk about social media. She's sick! What am I going to do? I need someone to present so that we fill up some time and people don't get bored.
- Adam: What about Denise? You know that she enjoys that sort of thing.
- Kristi: Good idea. Can you send her a text? She'll be on her way to the bookstore now.
- Adam: Okay. Also, I have a friend who works in social media. He could come and speak about the genres of social media and how they pertain to kids and then Denise could introduce the author and the book. You'll remember my friend Thomas. You met him at my birthday party.
- Kristi: Oh Adam, that would be great. I do remember him. He's very engaging. He would be great. Can you get him to come over here now so that we can go over what he's going to say?
- Adam: Sure. I'll text him now.

Let's Practice!

Kristi and Adam love talking about work.

Extension Activity

A consent form for a class field trip.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Imagine that you are a teacher at an elementary school. You and another teacher want to take your classes out on a field trip. The policy at the school requires consent forms from the students' parents.
- Work with a classmate (you both are "teachers") to create a consent form that is to be signed by your students' parents.
- Use the Internet to search for examples if you need help.
- Include relevant information based on the field trip that you wish to take. For example, you can include information about when you will leave and come back, where you will go, safety concerns, and so on.
- Present your consent form to another pair of students in your class.
- Imagine the other pair of students are your students' parents.
- Explain the form to them and give reasons why you need to have them consent to this information.
- Switch roles and let the other pair present their consent form.
- Discuss the information on the consent form as a class when all groups are finished.

Learning Points

Purpose Clauses: In order that, so that, for

When you want to explain the purpose or reason behind a decision or action, you can use purpose clauses, such as:

In order that, So that , For

For

You use For to indicate the use of something.

Example: I have practiced the songs a lot for the concert.

You use For to mean "because of".

Example: She is very sad for your loss.

In order that

You use In order that / So that to talk about the purpose of an action.

It is important to be aware of the verbs and tenses when you use these phrases. Compare these two sentences:

Example: She worked late in order that/ so that she completed the work by the deadline. She worked late in order that /so that she could complete the work by the deadline.

NOTE: Another difference between those two clauses is that In order that is more formal than So that.

Examples:

- We've got an alternate entrance so that we don't clog up the main entrance.
- I had to research in order that I would know what the requirements of a consent form are.
- I'll use it for getting permission to use photos.
- I need someone to present so that we fill up some time and people don't get bored.
- Can you get him to come over here now so that we can go over what he's going to say?

Learning Points

Will to Express Willingness or Intention to do Something

Will and Would are modals. You can use these modals to express willingness and intention. Willingness can be defined as the readiness to do something. Intention can be defined as an aim or plan.

Will / Won't

You use Will / Won't to express that someone is / is not willing to do something in the present.

For example:

Richard is a nice guy; he will always help you if you are in trouble.

Fernanda is mad at me; she will not (won't) talk to me.

I'll wash the plates if you put them away.

We're going to the museum. Will you join us?

When you use Will in the first person, it can express intention.

For example:

I'll do my homework later tonight.

Would / Would Not

You use Would / Wouldn't to express that someone was / was not willing to do something in the past. Example: My grandpa was such a nice man; he would always help people if they were in need.

Take a look at some examples from the text:

Examples:

- I'll stand outside for a bit to make sure people can find the entrance.
- I'll use it for getting permission to use photos.
- I had to research in order that I would know what the requirements of a consent form are.
